SURFACE TREATMENT

Lacquered

- High abrasion resistance and better durability as the surface is sealed.
- Increased scratch resistance due to UV-cured lacquer.
- The closed surface makes the floor less sensitive to scratches and stains.
- With the lacquer surface intact, moisture and dirt cannot penetrate.
- Very easy to clean - wiping with a suitable cleaning agent is sufficient.
- No partial repairs possible; for renovations, the floor must be sanded down as a whole.

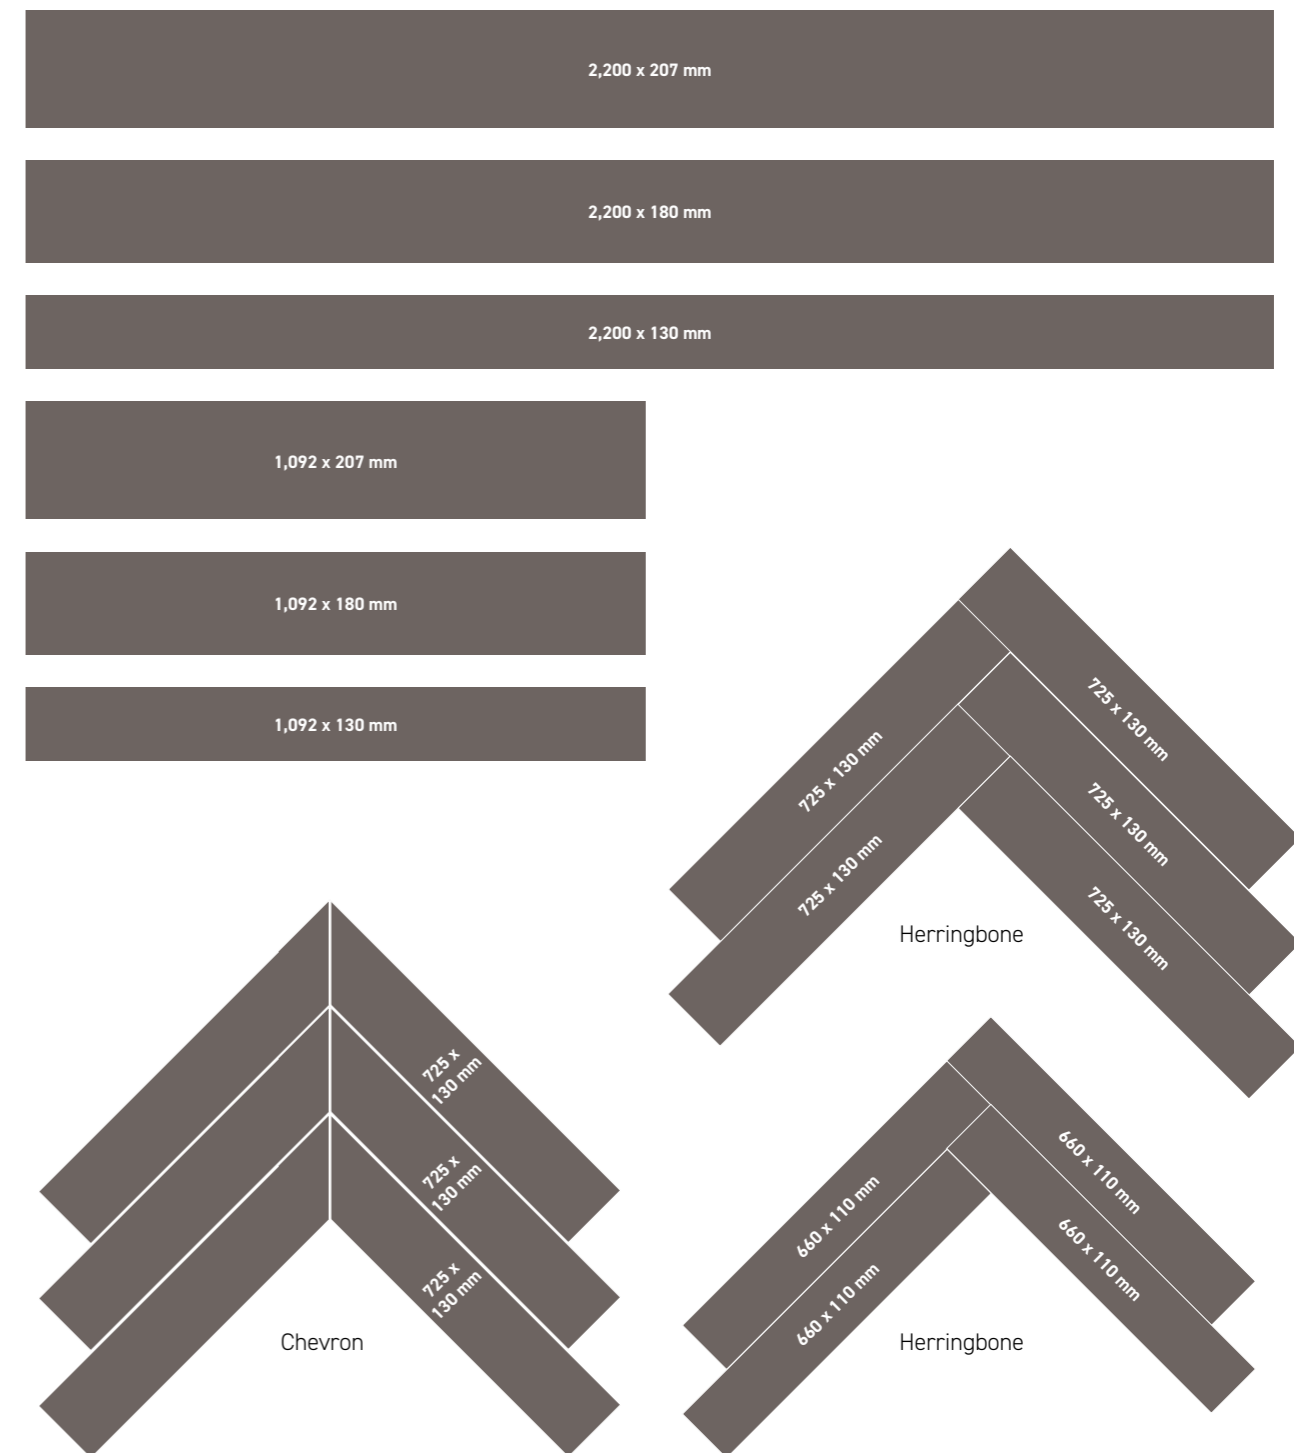

Oiled

- Natural and pollutant-free surface.
- Open-pored - wood breathes.
- Wood structure and grain are better accentuated.
- Compared to lacquered surfaces, the floor does not necessarily have to be sanded down for full-surface renovations. The floor is simply freshened up, i.e. it is cleaned with a single-disc machine and intensive cleaner and then re-oiled. In this way, the valuable wear layer is completely preserved, as are haptically special surfaces such as brushing or hand-planing. Sanding dust in the home is thus a thing of the past. If desired, however, sanding off is also possible at any time.
- No flaking or bursting of the surface coating.
- Very matt, natural surface.
- However, maintenance is somewhat more time-consuming than with lacquered surfaces; dirt particles can adhere more easily.

PLANK FORMATS FOR DESIGNERS

INSTRUCTIONS FOR CARE AND MAINTENANCE

Wooden parquet is not recommended for rooms where the floor is exposed to direct contact with water, nor for rooms with increased humidity.

Under office chairs on castors, the parquet should be protected from damage with floor mats or soft castors should be used.

The biggest enemies of wooden floors are water and sand. Keep the wooden floor clean by sweeping, vacuuming and regular mopping with a damp - but not wet - cloth.

To protect the wooden floor from the harmful effects of sand and water - and salt in winter - door mats should be placed in the entrance area to the house or flat.

Pedestals, furniture legs and furniture parts that exert pressure on the floor should be fitted with felt glides (but these must not be fixed with nails).

Walking on wooden floors in shoes with high heels should be avoided.

The parquet is not recommended for rooms where the floor is exposed to direct contact with water, nor for rooms with increased humidity.
